Why are you doing that?

What are you doing this week? Why?

Most organisations are searching for ever greater efficiency. One way to help achieve that is to question the value of everything we do. Which activities wouldn't your organisation miss if they stopped happening? What things add relatively little value?

I'm thinking about the meetings we sit in that are pointless; way too long; or don't need us there to be effective. The information we gather, and then don't use. The reports we produce but no-one reads.

If we can identify these activities we can free up time to use more beneficially elsewhere.
